FILM PRODUCTION

After college, I worked in documentary production for two years, before deciding to pursue a career in philosophy. During that period, I won some grants and directed some films. I also acquired audio and video editing skills, which I continue to use in academic settings.

Sanders Lectures

120 minutes; 2018 (Fall); credited as editor. Published online.

120 minutes; 2018 (Spring); credited as editor. Published online.

120 minutes; 2017; credited as editor. Published online.

Luke Barnes on Fine Tuning, Rutgers Philosophy of Religion 2017

120 minutes; credited as editor: audio and video recording of Luke Barnes' 2017 lecture on fine tuning, sponsored by the Rutgers Center for the Philosophy of Religion. Published online.

Newton's Principia

75 hours; 2015; credited as editor: audio and video recording of a two-semester course on the science and philosophy of Newton's Principia.

American Diner

105 minutes; 2013; credited as director, DP, editor: a documentary about three small-town diners. Screenings: Kartemquin, Chicago; Doc Films, Chicago.

The Point

15 minutes; 2011; credited as director, sound producer, DP, editor: a documentary about Promontory Point. Screenings: Film Studies Center, University of Chicago.
